Protective Surveillance & Covert Executive Protection (PS-001)

The Objective: “Reclaiming the tactical advantage”
The traditional nature of Executive Protection (EP) involves responding and reacting to possible threats. However, functioning in a reactive mode means that the adversary will always have the tactical advantage by having the choice of where, when, and how they will conduct their hostile act. This enables the adversary to retain and maximize the element of surprise. This course will enable the EP professional to reclaim the element of surprise by providing techniques and methodologies to perform protective surveillance and to protect your Principal or fixed site in a truly covert manner. These skills will allow you to effectively “come out of the woodwork” and surprise any hostile force, thereby, reclaiming the tactical advantage. Another important factor is that more and more Principal’s do not want to “feel” nor see the Executive Protection agent unless it’s necessary; by conducting Protective Surveillance, you will be protecting your Principal while not being “felt” by them, thus, providing the service while maintaining the “freedom” of your Principal.

The Course Philosophy
It is our philosophy that in order to identify a sophisticated adversary as early as possible, one must fully appreciate and understand how the adversary behaves, collects information and operates. Operating covertly enables the protection operative to regain the tactical advantage and surprise, thereby, maximizing the protection efforts while the client does not feel the presence of the security team.
